Research diary entry (08/05/19)

This is the clash between practitioner and researcher. If I was just a researcher perhaps, I wouldn't know or care so much? It is interesting that when I mentioned my title to another participant who sits on the feminist side, they said that it was a good point about my title. But I went through five months of ethics to get here and I had to explicitly state my positionality. If I hadn't, I would be accused of lying later. I am personally angry and upset. Maybe I should change the title – but if I change it halfway through is that transparent? Especially if I add it back in later?
